HURRAH FOR JONES!

Hurrah for Jones! Let Smith and Brown
Please run away back and sit down!
Unfurl the flag and bravely shout,
And may the brazen bells ring out!
Come, let us all in thunder tones
Pass on the word: "Hurrah for Jones!"

He swept the sea—I don't know when;
He fought for us—I don't know where.
We'll never see his like again;
He did up old King George for fair—I speak from hearsay, gentlemen,
And do not claim that I was there.

Hurrah for Jones—I mean J. P.,
The sailor bold who swept the sea,
Let Smith and Brown get in the rear
And wave their hats for once and cheer;
These may or may not be his bones!
But, anyway, let's whoop for Jones!
—Chicago Record-Herald.

Time has been called after the first round at Portsmouth.

The Bowen-Loomis controversy is about due to break out again.

The impression seems to prevail in Washington that the peace conference will break up in a row within a week.

The Birmingham Age-Herald suggests a Folk-Jerome ticket for 1908 with the motto: "Down with the grafters."

Assistant Secretary of State Loomis has returned. Evidently the European consular service didn't need much reforming.

John D. Rockefeller will not run for mayor of Cleveland. He is missing a great opportunity to unload a goodly bunch of tainted money.

Governor Broward made the mistake of his life when he decided to spend his vacation at Hot Springs. He should have selected Pensacola.

"Governor Vardaman has got the foot, sporadic, bacilli and stegomyias backed into a corner and scrambling for cracked ice," remarks the Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

THE OLD QUESTION OF THE HEN AND THE EGG.

A Doubting Thomas has written the following communication to the Mobile Register upon a question which, to judge from similar queries that have recently appeared in different newspapers, has troubled the minds of many readers:

To the Editor of The Register:
If the mosquito transmits the propagator yellow fever by inserting his little bill into a yellow fever patient, and then into a well person, what produces the first case of yellow fever for the mosquito to commence on? In other words, how can the mosquito transmit the fever without a patient to work on in order to load up her gun with the poison? Please answer.
A DOUBTING THOMAS.

The Register answers the question Yankee fashion by propounding the following question, which, however, the aforesaid Doubting Thomas will have considerable trouble in answering:

We have been expecting this question for some time. We will ask "Thomas" a question in turn: Which came first into the world, the larva from which the mosquito is hatched, or the mosquito that laid the larva? This is the old question of the hen or the egg in another form. Let "Thomas" answer our question. We do not pretend to be able to answer his. We dare not say that yellow fever was given either to the first man or to the first mosquito affected by it, as an act of special Providence. But why bother over such a question, when it is a demonstrated fact that scientific men have tried in every conceivable way to transmit yellow fever and have succeeded in but one way, namely, by medium of a mosquito infected from a person sick of yellow fever. Doubt as much as you please about the origin of life and disease, but doubt no longer as to the transmission of yellow fever. According to all human probabilities, that question is settled.

FLAMING HEADLINES ARE UNWARRANTED.

Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Many Eastern and Northern journals are handling the yellow fever situation with flaming headlines, the spirit of which is not sustained by the facts contained in the article following. This is a violation of the first principles of newspaper ethics and should meet with popular condemnation. Some of the higher class journals of these sections of the country have adhered strictly to legitimate "heads," but others, possibly carried away by the indiscriminate and at times injudicious quarantines established by a number of Southern towns, have followed in the path blazed by the "yellow journals," so plentiful north of Mason and Dixon's line.

These "scare heads," representing the whole South as panic-stricken, with the people fleeing in terror of the yellow fever, do us a great injustice and at the same time grossly deceive their readers, who are led to believe that Southern territory is a plague center feared by its inhabitants and to be shunned by all who do not live there. The truth is the South, while keenly alive to the danger of yellow fever, fears the effect of the appearance of the disease on Northern capital far more than it dreads any ravages the plague may be able to make in these days of scientific knowledge, excellent sanitation and systematic treatment.

We are aware that yellow fever in the South under existing conditions has a more ferocious bark than bite. It is more than probable that the entire list of its victims will alone not equal the typhoid deaths in Philadelphia. It is noticeable that, thus far, the ratio of deaths from yellow fever throughout the entire country has been as 40 to 76 compared to the typhoid victims of that portion of the City of Brotherly Love taking its water from the infected districts of the Schuylkill. The area in Philadelphia thus affected contains only a few thousand more inhabitants than New Orleans. Certainly the authorities of the Eastern town are more or less alarmed and they are trying to meet the situation, but the adjacent country, while watching the typhoid plague closely, is not stampeded, nor are other cities viewing the situation with any of that terror calculated to dispel confidence in the town.

If the North would extend a similar confidence to the South yellow fever at New Orleans or any other town would cease to be an occasion for sidereal headlines, but at present yellow fever is the dog with the bad name. He has been vicious in the past. We who know him are aware that his teeth have been extracted, but our neighbors are not yet convinced of this, so we are still forced to handle this one time "bad dog" with muzzle, block and chain. But many wise and scientific heads are looking over the fence, and if the South demonstrates its ability to keep its "bad dog" well in hand we may hope this summer's barking will in no way impede the magnificent progress of this section during the past five years.
